

Top
DENVER
DESIGN

5

Master Bedroom

Duet Design Group had clear marching orders from the owners of this Cherry Hills Village home: Make the handmade bed the centerpiece of the master bedroom. Luckily, it wasn't an unfamiliar task: "That bed has gone with me to every bedroom I've done for this client," says Devon Tobin, co-founder of the Littleton-based firm that has designed multiple homes for the young couple—including this one. Handmade by the homeowner and his father from slabs of narra hardwood, the piece is certainly rustic, but the couple's style isn't as easily defined: "They are truly eclectic," Tobin says. "They love modern, they love industrial, she has a true passion for that sophisticated luxurious look...they just love good design." To satisfy all their tastes this time around, Duet assembled a texture-rich mix of furnishings that span the style spectrum: a feminine pair of mercury-glass-and-bronze lanterns from Currey & Company; sleek wood Sho Modern nightstands with perforated-metal bases and acrylic drawer pulls; linen curtains and Roman shades; and a showstopping abstract-watercolor wallcovering from Area Environments. "The headboard is low and the ceilings are high, so the wallcovering creates a sort of 'headboard wall,'" Tobin explains. The look, though bold, is designed to last: "I like to push the limits of design in areas that are easy to change—a crazy wallcovering, bold pillows," Tobin says. But, she adds, when it comes to the room's foundations—walnut-paneled ceilings, site-finished white-oak floors, custom-stained baseboards—"the longevity of those is forever." Until the next bedroom comes along.

////////////////////
PROS > Interior design
by Duet Design Group
Architecture by Brett Linscott,
Architectural Workshop
Construction by Wade Cumming, C4 Ltd.

photograph by EMILY MINTON REDFIELD