

A RESIDENCE WITH
UNATTENDED

LAMBERT – DUET DESIGN GROUP

“The homeowner hired Duet Design Group to take their vision of a serene, tonal, textural dream home and successfully implement every detail.”

Attractively situated in Sedalia, Colorado, this property homes the interior design by Duet Design Group. Miranda Cullen and Devon Tobin, the founders of Duet Design Group have combined 30 plus years of experience in interior design. The duo set out to produce an interior design firm that would achieve any needs of their clients and in doing so were given the brief to design the Lambert residence. The property was architecturally designed by the Woodley Architectural Group.

For inspiration, the client provided Duet Design Group with a magazine article that they enjoyed and wanted them to take a little inspiration from. The designers creatively interpreted it into an entire home that was tonal, textured and subtly beautiful.

The Lambert residence is in the middle of Sedalia, which is more rural and connected to the mountain terrain. This home gives a sense of being in the mountains while still being refreshing and city close.

This unique custom home was created for an affluent couple with grown children and their growing brood of grandchildren. This sprawling ranch style home is rich with textures and finishes. The homeowner hired Duet Design Group to take their vision of a serene, tonal, textural dream home and successfully implement every detail. The collaborative team effort between the builder, architect and design team was the reason this project left no detail unattended. The inspiration that drove the direction of this home was a grand living space that was perfectly positioned to enjoy the peaceful and beautiful views over the Rocky Mountains. The overall design has a serene ambiance, allowing the client to be totally relaxed and their guests to feel the same.

The grand area is surrounded by floor to ceiling windows and stone. It is the perfect setting to cook, dine, relax and entertain. One of Duet Design Group's favourite aspect of the residence is the south wall, this opens up completely to a covered veranda that looks out to the exquisite pool deck. It creates a light-infused space that could otherwise be overwhelmed with the darkness and the weight of all of the interior stone. The customized upholstered doors that are used to set off the master suite are truly amazing. Duet Design Group created many unexpected and understated architectural elements to give every wall special attention. The lower level of this space consists of a comfortable recreations area. This area is considered the “bunk room” for the grandchildren. Moving further into this area allows for 2 guests in their own suites and an entomology studio for the homeowner's hobbies.

The stonework in this home is vast and required the most intricate of skilled masonry. The mason did an amazing job making sure Duet Design Group's colour balance was achieved as well as piecing in every last piece of stone perfectly. There are sphere light fixtures in the landing and the hall by the stairwell. These harmoniously integrate into their surroundings of brick walls.

The upholstered doors in the master suite use a Wolf Gordon faux leather in Snowflake. The furnishings in the Great Room and the Dining Room are a mixture of Restoration Hardware, Noir Trading Brownstone Furniture and Vanguard Furniture.

Since the completion of Duet Design Group's Lambert residence, they have been shortlisted in the category Living Space – Global in the upcoming International Design and Architecture Awards. When speaking with Haleigh Christ, Duet Design Group's Creative Coordinator about the Awards she commented, “Our company has a large presence in Colorado, more specifically in Denver, and we're ready to spread our presence even larger. We believe entering and potentially winning in the ID&A awards is a great way to do that. Attending the awards ceremony in London would also be an incredible experience for us to meet others within the industry, but outside of our normal network.”

When Duet Design Group received their feedback from the clients on the Lambert residence. The clients spoke of how amazed they were by how well the designers figured out what they would like and wouldn't like. The clients explained that Duet Design Group “pulled together comprehensive designs that we fell in love with when we saw them executed.”
